When half of the delegates.

When half of the delegates.

When half of the delegates.

When half of the delegation of presidential candidates was aired in Kansas, the Progressive leaders in the Republican party wanted to make certain their control of the delegation. It was when Senator Charles Curtis mentioned the advisability of an uninstructed delegation that Joseph L. Bristow, former senator, saw the evil ways of the world revealed in the Curtis pian. Bristow declared that nothing suit the Kansas voters and that nothing suit the Kansas voters and that sang judgment could not be taken in the next convention.

That was some weeks ago. Willing to Divide.

Now the effect of the Republican league ghost dance is being observed eye in the attitude of state leaders con-cerning national issues. Only the oth-er day a progressive Republican mentioned that the progressives and con-servatives should divide the delegation fifty-fifty. It was pointed out that Hughes will not be a candidate and that no sentiment has crystallized for any particular candidate. But Hughes months ago. the demand for an instructed delegation for a presidential candidate. Now things are different.

It is even probable that such radical and extreme conservative Republicans as Curtis and Scott might be given A feature places on the delegation—part of the Big Four among the delegates at arge. In exchange for Curtis and Scott, however, the progressives would ask that Capper and Bristow be placed on the list of delegates at large. Both Capper and Bristow are willing to go to a convention as uninstructed dele-gates, it is stated, and can now sit with Curtis and Scott in the selection of a national leader who can control the national leader who can control the rive in this city either this evening or
